MCCCN worked with Los Angeles Mission College and the Greater Missionary Baptist Church to host an event for the community. The event focused on the importance of Math and Science for students at all stages of their education. African American students were the focus of the group of people who gathered at the church to hear Dr. Perez talk about his efforts to collaborate with churches in the area.

The College currently offers the STEM program that provides innovative teaching and learning experiences in science, technology, engineering and mathematics. For more information you can visit the website or call 818-364-7600 Ext. 4161 or 818-833-3425 for a STEM Counselor.

Dr. Perez connects with community members at the event.

History shows us that there have been a number of famous African American mathematicians. These are just a few of the names that came up when we searched the Internet:

David Blackwell

There is a foundation in the African American community for achieving excellence in the fields of math and science. A group of people gathered at the Greater Missionary Baptist Church to discuss how we can encourage our students to excel in these areas so they can compete for job opportunities that require excellent skills in math and science.

MISSION CITY COMMUNITY NETWORK-NONPROFIT COMMUNITY CLINIC

Nik Gupta
CEO

Mission City Community Network, Inc. (MCCN) is a nonprofit community clinic with headquarters in North Hills. The clinic was founded in 1989 and is a Federally Qualified Health Center (FQHC) providing services to underserved populations in the SFV and other areas of Los Angeles County.

The clinic provides full service medical, dental, and behavioral health services. For more information on clinic services, call 818-895-3100,

Advancing Mobile Healthcare

Many experts believe a key solution for advancing access to healthcare on a continuing basis is the addition of mobile units. MCCN is committed to bringing mobile medical and dental clinics to expand its community outreach. Here are pictures of the latest addition to MCCN Mobile Clinic Services:

Role of Community Health Clinics

According to many estimates, The Affordable Care Act (ACA) will move 32 million Americans into the insured population in this country. How will all those additional people be provided with quality healthcare? Community Health clinics, like MCCN, will be the “front-end” primary care providers and will take in these newly covered patients.

Community Health clinics are integrated into The Affordable Care Act because they are seen as a key component for redesigning American health care delivery to improve quality, lower cost, and expand access to people. Community Health clinics will receive billions in funding to expand services, for operating costs, and for new construction. MCCN has already been awarded grants to make improvements at the main clinic in North Hills and build a new facility a few blocks from that location.

Another key component in providing access to all those newly insured people who need to receive healthcare is to provide mobile services.

Mobile clinic services in Pomona

MCCN continues to expand its mobile clinic services. The newest unit will serve San Fernando Valley Schools as well as the Community. Funding for this project was made available through the Affordable Care Act (ACA).
